In writing, authors use emotive language to get you to believe something, react to something, feel something, do something. They use it to persuade you.

Have you ever used emotive language to get what you want?
Have you ever used persuasion (guilt) to get something?

‘I will be the ONLY kid without..’

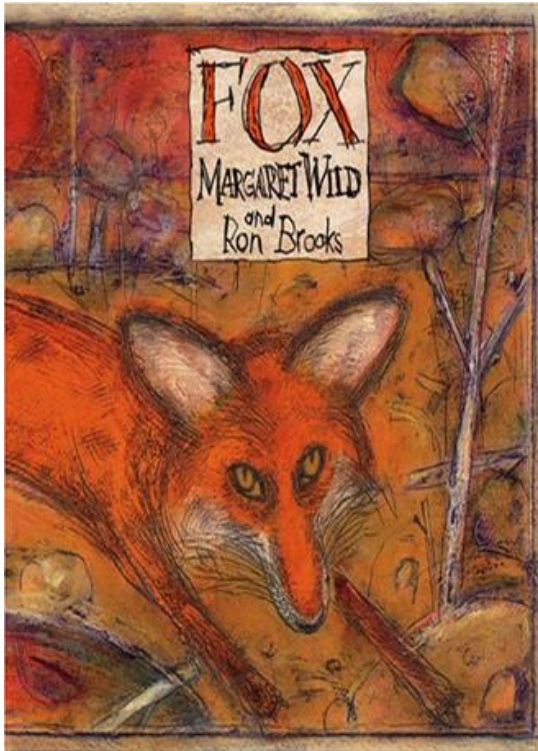

‘I will be really LONELY if you don’t..’

‘I will NEVER forgive you if you don’t...’

Practice It - Emotive language

You are going to have three minutes to read the text below and write down all the use of emotive language.

“Stop!” cautioned Tyler before Kerry stepped on a blood stained bone. They were currently creeping through the ancient, haunted graveyard at the edge of their sleepy town. “Don’t speak to me like that!” snarled Kerry. “Why am I here? This is disgusting,” she moaned. “We need to find proof of the foul, violent creature for our assignment.” Tyler reminded her yet again. “I don’t see why you couldn’t have come without me,” Kerry whined. “These are brand new, super-expensive shoes and now they’re ruined!” she wailed as she stood in the pitch-black shadows.

Using the key ideas we have just discussed, you are now going to complete the independent task in assignments, labelled 26 Jan English.

For this task, you will be using images to create persuasive paragraphs using emotive language and imperative verbs. Please choose the chilli task you would normally pick at school.

You will be placed into breakout rooms so that you can discuss your task with an adult.
Please open your task, read it and ask any questions you have.

You will only be able to leave your breakout rooms if your adult gives you permission.
