The blizzards did not phase the skiers. Despite the winter enveloping the land in her grip, they stood ready to race. Ready to turn their dreams into a reality although their dreams were in the mountain's control. They paced at the start line, eyes fixed firmly on the finishing line, willing legs to find their power. Their heart was a drum. Time felt irrelevant. It was time to ski! Their skis skidded and sliced through the ice and snow as they made their way down the mountain unaware of the black clouds that dominated the skies...

Section of Build up	Mag pied phrase
